In Memoriam

In sad but loving remembrance of my dear mother, Willie Carter Bondurant, who departed this life one year ago today, April 4, 1931.
Through all pain at times she smiled—a smile of heavenly birth,
And when the angels called her home, she smiled farewell to earth.
Heaven retaineth now my treasure,
Earth the lonely casket keeps,
And the sunbeams love to linger—
Where my dear mother sleeps.
Her Children: Mrs. W. H. Robertson, Mrs. A. L. Weakley, Mrs. M. A. Stratton, Mr. Tom Bondurant, and Wallace Bondurant.

In Memoriam

In memory of our beloved mother, Mrs. Maud Oliver, who died two years ago today, April 1, 1930.
In a far and distant graveyard,
Where the trees their branches wave,
Lies our darling mother
Whom we tried so hard to save,
Dearest mother, how we miss you,
Tears in silence often flow;
And our hearts still are bleeding
Though you died two years ago.
Children, Pauline and C. A., Jr.

In memory of my dear wife, Mrs. Maud Oliver, who passed away two years ago today, April 1, 1930.

For many years we traveled along life's pathway together, and then like a tired child you calmly laid down and slept, leaving me here with a broken heart, to journey on alone.
But God is good,
He gave me strength to bear my heavy cross.
He is the only one who knows How bitter was my loss.

That's why Castoria is used by so many doctors and mothers. It is specially made for children's ailments; contains no harsh, harmful drugs, no narcotics. You can safely give it to young infants for colic pains. Yet it is an equally effective regulator for older children. The next time your child has a little cold or fever, or a digestive upset, give him the help of Castoria, the children's own remedy. Genuine Castoria always has the name:

Old Home At Bremo Opened

Famous Home Will Attract Many Visitors During Tour

Another old Virginia home dating back to Colonial days has been added to the hundred that will be opened to the public during Virginia Garden Week, April 25 to 30, inclusive, through the work of the Garden Club of Virginia. It is famous old Bremo, on the upper James, at Bremo Bluff.

Besides the lovely dwelling, designed for the builder by Thomas Jefferson and including many features of construction used at Monticello, Bremo is famous as the site of the first monument to prohibition in this country, a Grecian Marble Temple, erected in 1830 in memory and honor to the Sons of Temperance. This unique and interesting memorial stands on the banks of the old James River Canal. It was built over a spring, and a great bronze pitcher was erected over the spring, the water flowing from its mouth.

Bremo also boasts of the most elaborate stone barn in Virginia. It is more commodious and dignified in appearance than most of the county courthouses in the United States. Large stone pillars somewhat similar to those of the capitol building in Richmond, decorate its front, and a clock tower rises from its roof.

Its other buildings, in excellent repair, include the old adobe mud slave quarters and a splendidly preserved negro school house. In its barn is housed the carriage in which Lafayette rode to Monticello to see Thomas Jefferson, still in an excellent state of repair.

The large and stately mansion has many interesting features, including its immense library, much original furniture and its beautiful hallways and covered passageways. Its present owner, Mrs. Forney Johnston, has done much to improve the property and bring it back to its original appearance.

Burke Replies To Debt Query

Appomattox One of Few Counties With No Indebtedness

County Treasurer R. L. Burke this week announced receipt of letters inquiring about the value of Appomattox county bonds, to which he was glad to reply that Appomattox county had no bonded indebtedness, Appomattox is one of the few counties in the state which has been able to administer its affairs efficiently without resorting to the issuance of bonds, and this fact stands as a boost to the financial condition of the county.

Such an inquiry and Mr. Burke's reply, are published below:

County Treasurer,
Appomattox County,
Dear Sir:

We are dealers in Virginia Municipals, and have on our list from time to time bonds of Appomattox.

We should be glad to have you advise us if you are in the market at this time to purchase any of your own bonds, if so, what amount and what particular maturities you desire, to the end that we may co-operate with you in supplying your requirements.

Awaiting your prompt reply, we are

Yours Very truly,
T. A. Uzzell & Company.

Dear Sirs:

I am in receipt of your favor of the 25th. inst., advising that you have on your list from time to time bonds of Appomattox County, Va. In this I must think that you are in error, as the County of Appomattox has no bonded indebtedness except a few thousand dollars owed by the school boards to the State Literary fund for erecting school buildings.

I am very happy to report that the officials of this county have very wisely handled their finances in the past and kept out of debt, and I sincerely hope and believe this will be their future policy.

Bonded indebtedness is bad enough in prosperous times, and in times such as the present almost unbearable, and it is certainly gratifying to me that our county has no bonded indebtedness.

Yours very truly,
R. L. Burke,
Co. Treasurer

Red Cross Wants Support In Work

Asks Public to Give Old Clothing to Needy in County

Mrs. S. L. Ferguson, of the local chapter of American Red Cross, this week declared that many appeals are being received for clothing for children and she wished to ask the public to make contributions of old clothing to be used for such distribution. She states that wearing apparel for children from one to fifteen years of age is needed. Many children in the county are handicapped in school attendance by lack of adequate clothing and the appeal now being made for contributions is hoped to bring results for a worthy cause. Clothing for this purpose may be taken direct to Mrs. Ferguson or left at the Times-Virginian office.

Byrd Statement Discusses Taxes And Road Bill

Former Governor Praises Financial Status of Virginia

(Special to Times-Virginian)

By Harry Flood Byrd

"An analysis of the accomplishments of the General Assembly of 1932 will show that Virginia has met the challenge of our greatest national problem as no other state has done. Today the greatest obstacle to business recovery is taxation and the fear of higher taxes. One dollar out of every five we earn as a nation goes to 250,000 tax-gathering and tax-spending agencies, and at least 18,000,000 of our citizens are dependent upon tax payrolls for their support.

"In 1913 our governmental expenses—local, state, and national, were $3,000,000,000. This has been increased to $15,000,000,000 in 1932, an increase of 500 per cent. It must be obvious to every one that we have a tax burden of $3,250,000,000 annually. It means that as the primary system of roads is completed the State will turn to the construction of a great system of secondary, or farm-to-market roads, bringing to every corner of the State the great benefits of road improvement finance completely by the gasoline and license taxes. It means that for the first time in our history Virginia will never depend entirely for road funds upon the collection of revenue from those who use and destroy the roads. It means that for the first time the gasoline tax will be equitably distributed throughout every section of the State. But even more important, it means that for the next two years, in this time of great economic crisis, the farmers of Virginia will pay $6,500,000 less in taxes. And "Under the able and wise leadership of Governor Pollard, the General Assembly of 1932 made a notable contribution to a reduction of the burdens of taxation upon the Virginia people. Governor Pollard's slogan "no tax increase, and live within the State's income", was followed by the General Assembly. The fact that the tax rates were not increased means substantially less tax collections from the people, as revenue derived from income and many other forms of taxation are less today at the same rates. The State revenue as appropriated for the two years beginning July 1, 1932, exclusive of the road funds, is $3,000,000 less than for the last two years.

"Governor Pollard, as a further safeguard, inserted a provision in the appropriation law that if Virginia fails to receive the income as estimated, all appropriations as made are correspondingly reduced. Virginia, therefore, stands nearly alone as not having a deficit today and is protected from a deficit in the future.

"Relief in local taxation was even greater. Under the Harman—Ferguson road bill the state assumed the responsibility for the maintenance, construction, and reconstruction of every public road and public bridge, and by law prohibited the assessment and collection of any county road tax hereafter.

"My name has been associated with this legislation because I suggested this plan, following the experience of North Carolina, at the public request of Governor West. Credit, however, is not due to me for its enactment and many provisions, but to the members of the General Assembly and to the Governor and the most efficient co-operation of my chairman Shirley. It means the lifting from the rural taxpayers of Virginia of a tax burden of $3,250,000 annually. It means that as the primary system of roads is completed the State will turn to the construction of a great system of secondary, or farm-to-market roads, bringing to every corner of the State the great benefits of road improvement finance completely by the gasoline and license taxes. It means that for the first time in our history Virginia will never depend entirely for road funds upon the collection of revenue from those who use and destroy the roads.
